Attractive Inland Empire Market

- Composed of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties
- Second largest PMSA in California with 3.5 million people at January 1, 2003
- One of the few areas in the country that has enjoyed continued job growth through the nationwide slump
- Private sector job growth averaged 5.7% per year from December 1996 through December 2000 compared to 3.5% for all of California
- Has experienced a 45% increase in manufacturing jobs since 1990, compared to a 20% decline statewide and a 40% decline in Los Angeles County
- While the Inland Empire now accounts for only 17% of Southern California's population, it has consistently accounted for over 30% of new home sales and construction; nearly 50% in the last two years
- Strong growth in the western part, adjacent to Los Angeles and Orange Counties, with ample land available for future growth
