Notice to Certain Current and Former Hanger Customers Regarding Possible Inadvertent Name, Address, and Procedure Code Release

February 14, 2011

Austin, TX, February 14, 2011 – A laptop computer containing name, address, and procedure codes for certain current and former Hanger Prosthetics & Orthotics customers was stolen from the home of a family member of an employee in Texas in November 2010. It's important to note the laptop did not contain social security numbers, credit card information, or other financial or personal identification information.

The theft was immediately reported to local law enforcement. There is no indication that anyone's personal information has been or will be misused as a result of this theft.

While Hanger mailed notices to all affected customers, this web posting is being made as an additional form of communication to persons whose contact information may not be up to date. Current and former customers may contact the legal department via email at legal@hanger.com if they didn't receive a notice in the mail and are concerned their information may have been in the files on the stolen laptop.

As a result of the theft, Hanger is taking several proactive steps to increase security. It has reminded all employees of the importance of safeguarding their company computers from theft or loss. It is continuing the ongoing implementation of its laptop encryption program. Finally, it is also reviewing its business processes to reduce the use of personal identifiers to a minimum.
