Stride, Inc. will support California school district with customized curriculum, an online platform, and teacher training to ensure learning continuity amid COVID-19.

HERNDON, Va.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- Amid ongoing concerns about the spread of the coronavirus and Delta variant, one of the most dynamic school districts in the country has designed an innovative online solution that will provide hundreds of students and families with a home-based learning option.

Today, Palo Alto Unified School District announced its partnership with Stride, Inc. (NYSE: LRN)—the nation's leading provider of innovative, high-quality, and tech-enabled education solutions. As part of this partnership, Palo Alto will provide an online curriculum and teacher-led instruction to students in transitional kindergarten (TK) through 12th grade during the 2021-2022 school year.

"Despite the impact that COVID-19 continues to have on our community, we are committed to providing diverse learning options that meet our students' needs," said Yolanda Conaway, Assistant Superintendent of Equity and Student Affairs at Palo Alto Unified School District. "We're happy to work alongside a trusted partner like Stride as we deliver a customized online experience for students and families who want or need this option."

With Palo Alto school staff guidance, Stride will provide customized services – including curriculum, assessment tools, educational services, and data management – to ensure a seamless start to the school year for students and families who choose an online solution.

In alignment with district standards and their respective learning goals, Palo Alto's customized online curriculum – including core subjects and electives – will deliver consistent content and resources district-wide.

Training and support will also be available for Palo Alto parents as they navigate the online learning experience alongside their students, and the platform offers translation features in 65 languages to ensure equitable access to high-quality digital curriculum for every student.

"We are proud to support Assistant Superintendent Conaway and the innovative solution she and the entire Palo Alto team have designed for their students and teachers," said Dr. Jodi Marshall, Senior Vice President of Stride's K12 Learning Solutions Division. "Palo Alto is a model for how other school districts can work with an experienced online learning provider to meet the learning needs of the students they serve. We welcome the opportunity to support schools and districts that may need help during this unprecedented time."
