"Tallo is honored to partner with Tideland Health to help the next generation of health care workers recognize their outstanding potential and take the first step toward achieving their dreams," said Casey Welch, CEO of Tallo. "The past year has taught us how valuable community health care workers are and we're excited to support students who have realized their calling for such a vital and in-demand industry."

Tallo and Tideland Health share a common goal of uplifting local families in South Carolina through the intersection of health care and education. This will be the third year the two organizations have joined together to connect promising students headed into the health care industry with scholarships.

"As the region's largest health care provider, Tideland Health is dedicated to supporting the well-being of our community. Helping the next generation of health care workers follow their dreams is key to this mission," said Caitlyn Krask, student program coordinator. "We're thrilled to be giving back to our communities in this way and hope to continue encouraging students to pursue a career in health care."

This year's recipients are:

Madison Williams, Academy for the Arts, Science, and Technology

Destiny Heyward, Carvers Bay High School

Joh'nieka Lawrence, Georgetown High School

Alyssa Paquette, St. James High School and Scholars Academy

Karson Todd, Conway High School

Chole Johnson, Waccamaw High School

"Learning is an integral part of who I am as a person and I intend to use what I garner to better help and serve others," said scholarship winner Alyssa Paquette. "It is my time to live my truth, be the change, and provide a dose of compassion in a complex and ever-changing world."
