

Traditional Back to School Routines Unfamiliar For Many California Students

August 27, 2014

Enrollment Still Open for New Students

SIMI VALLEY, Calif., Aug. 27, 2014 /PRNewswire-USNewswire/ -- New school supplies and meeting new teachers are still part of the first day of school for students enrolled in one of the 11 California Virtual Academy schools (CAVA), IQ Academy California (IQCA) and Insight Schools of California (ISCA). They'll meet each other in homeroom and catch up with classmates from last year, but there won't be any backpacks, school cafeteria food or catching the bus for these students, who go to school full-time online. Instead, they'll be learning how to log on, manage their homework and meet their assigned teacher as they learn from home.

CAVA, IQCA, and ISCA are tuition-free, online public school, available to students across the state of California. Students attend school full-time online, and use the internet to access the engaging, award-winning K<sup>12</sup> curriculum. A public school choice, CAVA, IQCA, and ISCA give parents and families the opportunity to maximize their success with individualized learning.

Similar to any first day of school, a student meets virtually with his or her California-credentialed teachers and logs in to explore the topics they will study that year. While the technology makes it possible to focus on each student's individual academic challenges and strengths, it is the partnership between parents and teachers that makes online learning a powerful education alternative for a variety of students. CAVA, IQCA, and ISCA teachers provide a child-centered learning experience, offering instruction and support, one-on-one guidance, and regular interaction with students and parents via an online classroom, email, phone or face-to-face meetings. Students have a vibrant school community with plenty of social interaction as well, working with peers in the online classroom, and gathering in-person for events like science fairs and service projects.

Students enroll in CAVA, IQCA or ISCA for a wide variety of reasons. Some are advanced learners, motivated to increase their knowledge beyond the basic course offerings, while others are athletes or performers looking to balance a full schedule, as well as those who benefit from a different learning environment and a focused one-on-one learning experience.

Katrina Abston, Head of School for the CAVA and ISCA schools said "We are excited about the beginning of another school year. Our staff and teachers are completely dedicated to helping thousands of California students succeed, from the first day of school through to graduation."

CAVA, IQCA, and ISCA are still accepting enrollment of students for the 2014-2015 school year. California families are invited to learn more about online education by signing up for in-person and online information sessions being held across the state.
